National Gazetteer of the United States Given Its Own Item Number

Improved Selectivity Now Possible

The US Geological Survey's National Gazetteer of the United States, which is Professional Paper 1200, is currently included under item number 0624, along with all the other USGS Professional Papers. A number of map depository libraries are dissatisfied with this arrangement because they must select and retain all of the professional papers when they are only interested in obtaining the National Gazetteer. Conversely, other libraries need the Professional Papers but do not wish to select the gazetteer, which will ultimately include all 50 states.

The Cartographic Users Advisory Council (CUAC) recommended that the Library Programs Service (LPS) split off Professional Paper 1200 from the rest of the professional papers and create one new item number for it. CUAC did not advocate an individual item number for each state.

In response to CUAC's recommendation, LPS has created item number 0624-A-01, for just the National Gazetteer of the United States. The SuDocs class stem will remain I 19.16:. LPS will not conduct a survey; those libraries currently selecting item 0624 will also receive 0624-A-01. Depository libraries may deselect either of these item numbers at any time.

Classification Changes Will Affect Your Library

Library Programs Service personnel have been working on several revisions of the Superintendent of Documents classification system which will affect depository operations. The following publications are affected:

Area Wage Surveys

LPS has received the approval of the Depository Library Council for the revision of the classes for the Area Wage Surveys, L 2.121/1:, etc. This change, which is detailed in Administrative Notes, v10-#1-1/89, was implemented by LPS at the end of February.

Area Wage Surveys processed during the period in which this proposal was under consideration, some of which were classed in the Bulletin series, L 2.3:(nos.), will not be changed by LPS. Individual depositories may adjust these titles at their discretion.

Industry Wage Survey Bulletins

Depository Distribution Information System (DDIS) limitations require changes in the classification of the Industry Wage Survey Bulletins (L 2.3/14:, etc.). These will no longer be classed separately, but will revert to the earlier class, L 2.3/3:(CT). LPS will use a cutter derived from the first significant word in the particular industry's title. All of the Industry Wage Surveys will be distributed in paper format under item number 768-C-01 rather than the existing item numbers. They will not be resurveyed. Item numbers 768-C-06 through 768-C-15 will be discontinued.

The following classes are discontinued:

- L 2.3/14: Industry Wage Survey: Millwork. 0768-C-06 MF
- L 2.3/15: Industry Wage Survey: Meat Products. 0768-C-01 MF
- L 2.3/19: Industry Wage Survey: Petroleum refining. 0768-C-01 MF
- L 2.3/21: Industry Wage Survey: Synthetic Fibers. 0768-C-01 MF
- L 2.3/22: Industry Wage Survey: Banking. 0768-C-01 MF
- L 2.3/23: Industry Wage Survey: Textile Mills. 0768-C-01 MF
- L 2.3/24: Industry Wage Survey: Hospitals. 0768-C-01 MF
- L 2.3/25: Industry Wage Survey: Nursing and Personal Care Facilities. 0768-C-01 MF
- L 2.3/26: Industry Wage Survey: Cigarette Manufacturing. 0768-C-07 P
- L 2.3/27: Industry Wage Survey: Wood Household Furniture. 0768-C-08 P
- L 2.3/29: Industry Wage Survey: Pressed or Blown Glassware. 0768-C-09 MF
- L 2.3/30: Industry Wage Survey: Structural Clay Products. 0768-C-10 MF
- L 2.3/31: Industry Wage Survey: Industrial Chemicals. 0768-C-11 MF
- L 2.3/32: Industry Wage Survey: Iron and Steel Foundries. 0768-C-12 MF

L 2.3/33: Industry Wage Survey: Contract Cleaning Services. 0768-C-13 MF
 L 2.3/34: Industry Wage Survey: Shipbuilding and Repairing. 0768-C-14 MF
 L 2.3/35: Industry Wage Survey: Men's and Boys' Shirts and Nightwear. 0768-C-15 MF
 L 2.3/37: Industry Wage Survey: Department Stores. 0768-C-01 MF
 L 2.3/38: Industry Wage Survey: Temporary Help Supply. 0768-C-01 MF

Industry Wage Survey Summaries

DDIS limitations also are forcing changes in the classification of the Industrial Wage Survey Summaries, L 2.113/5:, L 2.123/1:, etc. These publications will no longer be assigned separate class stems. Instead, they will be placed in a new class stem, L 2.3/3-2:(CT), near the related Industry Wage Survey Bulletins. Individual publication numbers after the colon will be assigned using the most specific designation appearing on the document, as follows:

1. Cuttered by industry;
2. Cuttered by industry and state or region;
3. Cuttered by industry and state with a superior number for cities within the state;
4. Numbered.

The current individual classes are discontinued and future issues will be placed in L 2.3/3-2:(CT). All Industrial Wage Survey Summaries will be distributed in under item 768-D-01 in paper format. Those libraries currently selecting item 768-C-01 will receive the summaries under the new item number automatically. The new item number (768-D-01) will not be surveyed.

USGS Topographic Quadrangles

LPS has recently become aware of some additional complications in the classification of the Geological Survey's 7.5' Series [of Topographic Quadrangle] maps, I 19.81:(quad. nos.). USGS has advised us that multiple photorevised editions of some quadrangles are being produced. There is also a "photoinspected" quad, a type about which LPS was previously unaware. These have required a slight adjustment in the classification of this series. Beginning in the June 1988 Monthly Catalog, all maps in the I 19.81: class will be identified by the alphanumeric quadrangle designator found on the lower right side of the map, followed by a slash and the date of the latest edition.

For example, the Blain, Pa., 7.5' quad bears the following dates: 1960, photorevised 1971, photoinspected 1984, and a 1988 printing date. The correct class for this sheet is: I 19.81:40077-C 5-TF-024/984.

What is a "Demonstrable Effort"?

In chapter 5 of the Instructions To Depository Libraries the Superintendent of Documents, through the Library Services Program of GPO, instructs Depository Libraries to, "either solely or in conjunction with neighboring depositories, ... make demonstrable efforts to identify and meet the Government information needs of the Congressional district or local area". You can be assured that this is more easily said than done. The second part of the injunction, "to meet the needs", is easily taken care of if you can only get a handle on the identifying part. Once identified, meeting the needs of your Congressional district can be done by adding the necessary materials to your selected list of depository items, processing them through your local system, and doing a little outreach in the area to let people know that you have them. The real challenge is finding out what your patrons want and/or need in the first place.

Several methods of ascertaining the needs of their patrons have been tried by harried librarians around the country. The usual result is a frustrated library staff, an annoyed clientele, and little or no valid information. One of these methods is the ever popular questionnaire. The question then becomes, whom do you survey? You can always ask the people already using the document section. This however, is next to impossible if your documents are not in a centralized collection. How about just asking anyone who comes to the reference desk? Unfortunately neither staff nor patrons generally have time for this approach. If your library happens to be housed on the campus of a college or university, there is always the faculty and/or graduate students who might be convinced to answer "just one more survey". Maybe you could just stand at the door and ask everyone coming into the building to fill in your questionnaire. Since most depository's fall into the category of academic or special libraries, even if you manage to somehow survey your patrons you run a large risk of having a built-in bias because you probably are still not getting to a cross section of the people in the Congressional district.

Another suggested method is to use a telephone book and randomly call people asking what kind of government information they need. Now this method might work (if you have plenty of time) in the East where districts tend to be geographically small. In the West, however, your phone bill would rapidly exceed most budgets.

Yet another method is unobtrusive observation. This technique, like the questionnaire, will in all likelihood give you a very biased view of the needs of your patrons. Yes, they are using what you have. But do you have everything thing they need, or are they simply settling for what they can get?

I must admit to having tried all of the above at one time or another, with the exception of the telephone method. My budget would never stretch the hundreds of miles covered by our Congressional district. I have even handed out questionnaires at the State Teachers Convention. The net result was that while I now had a collection that generally met the needs of our faculty and students I still did not feel that I had made a "demonstrable effort" to contact the public at large.

One day after answering a question referred by our local public library, it suddenly dawned on me that all those public librarians out there in the state were the people who were fielding the majority of the questions from the general public. They talk to the housewives, store owners, Boy Scouts, and debate students that I rarely see. Maybe, just maybe, the public libraries could furnish an answer to the question, "what does the public really want or need".

This time as I sat down to formulate my questionnaire I could ask questions of a colleague, someone who dealt on a daily basis with the people I was trying to reach. Knowing how busy most librarians are I kept my survey to a single sheet hoping that by so doing most of them would take the time to respond instead of dropping it into the circular file. Since Brigham Young University is also a state depository I took the opportunity to ask about both state and federal documents.

After drafting the survey instrument I presented it to the next GODORT steering committee meeting to see how the rest of the members felt about the idea. While Utah has three Congressional districts, the majority of her 1,461,000 residents live at the base of the Wasatch Mountains in a north south line from Ogden to Provo. The remainder reside in the many small towns scattered throughout the rural areas of the state. Since there are only 109 public libraries (counting the bookmobiles) in the state it was deemed by the GODORT members to be more feasible to have all the questionnaires sent out from one depository rather than involving the several depositories in the state. This method would facilitate the gathering and tabulating of all the responses, and the data gathered could then be shared with the other depositories. A survey was sent to the head librarian at each public library in the state by the Documents and Maps Department at Brigham Young University. We received a 70% response rate.

One of the questions asked was, "How can we be of service to you?" A large number responded by asking for: 1) A core list of basic items for a small library; 2) how to order federal and /or state materials; and 3) a list of the depositories in the area. We are in the processes of compiling this information and will send it to all those who specifically ask for this material. It will also be made available at the Utah Library Association Convention.

I now feel that we have really made a "demonstrable effort" and that we know the type of government information that all our patrons are asking for. In Utah a profile of the an average patron seeking government materials is that of a male between the ages of 30 and 45. He is looking for statistical, tax or patent/copyright information that most of the public libraries cannot furnish. Unfortunately, he is usually not referred to one of the several depositories in the state but is sent directly to the issuing agency in the hope that someone will eventually answer his question.

Several responses to the questionnaire led me to conclude that as depository librarians we need to make our time and resources more readily available to assist public librarians with their patrons. To this end, GODORT sponsored a workshop on patents at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City in November and will also present a workshop for public and school librarians in February in St. George, Utah at the Utah Library Association Convention.

If you are having trouble thinking of a way to comply with the regulation on identifying and meeting the needs of your Congressional district, let me highly recommend that you survey your colleagues in the public libraries. Not only do you gain a feel for needed materials but you can lend a hand where it will be greatly appreciated.
